AEZ Tidore Dark

– Just add water!

Tidore is the name of a picturesque island in the Moluccas, a true paradise for divers. So what has an Indonesian diving resort got to do with an alloy wheel and why did AEZ settle on this name? The connection is the incredible Rinspeed sQuba submarine car. Remember the James Bond Lotus that went underwater? That was clever photography. The sQuaba does it for real - and AEZ designed the Tidore specifically for the sQuba.

The AEZ Tidore is now available to the general public in 7x16 to 8x19 sizes and the matt anthracite 'Dark' finish.

Visually the five strongly curved double spokes and a very deeply pulled-back middle area have all the grace and style of the tropical fish you might encounter on a dive, but don't be fooled by the delicate styling. The Tidore is as tough as a shark and the bi-colour finish and the row of 'teeth' around the inset rim give just a hint of this. What you can't see is the protective matte clear coat finish and the EH2+Hump Technology to enable this wheel to operate with Runflat tyres. This wheel was designed to operate on roads, stoney and sandy beaches and underwater... a little English rain won't present a problem!

Like all AEZ rims the Tidore is, of course, tested and certified by the German TÜV (Technical Inspection Agency) for safety and quality.
